Rocky's Zone: Super Bowl home for Soldiers

Spc. Michael Adams
3rd ID Public Affairs

Rocky's Zone will be showing the Super Bowl at an all-day Super Bowl party featuring tournaments, prizes and a chance for eight lucky Soldiers to get V.I.P. treatment while watching the game. Doors open at 11 a.m.

This year's Super Bowl pits the Green Bay Packers against the Pittsburgh Steelers. Coverage begins at 6:30 p.m. "This is the Soldier's place," said Marline Parker, facility manager at Rocky's Zone. "It's a place for Soldiers to come and have a really great time. This is our way of saying thank you for all the Soldiers have done for us."

Parker added that this is an excellent opportunity for Soldiers to celebrate being home, since much of the division was deployed during the last Super Bowl. She expects turnout to be very high; in 2010 there were 750 people who showed up, despite much of the division being in a combat zone.

There will be many other events going on at the club aside from the game.

Events include an NFL-themed Texas Hold-em tournament, a Call of Duty – Black Ops video game tournament for the Playstation 3, a Madden 2011 video game tournament for the Playstation 3, a nine-ball tournament, a Spades tourney and a three-point basketball shootout. All tournaments will start at noon.

Contests will have a prize for first and second place. Prizes include iPods, gaming systems and many more. Door prizes will also be given throughout the day.

There will also be a drawing for Soldiers at 5 p.m., that afternoon to receive V.I.P. treatment during the Super Bowl. Eight Soldiers will win an opportunity to enjoy free food and recliner seats while watching the game. For those who win, the game will be presented in surround sound on a movie screen. Those people will also have the opportunity to bring someone along.

One person who works at the club is already looking forward to Sunday.

"I'm really excited," said Lindsay Grammer, a recreation aide with Rocky's Zone. "We're going to have a lot of fun stuff going on. I've never been part of a big Super Bowl party before. It's good to know they have something to do rather than just sit in their barracks all day."

Soldiers attending the party will be able to bring a guest. Anyone attending the club will have to be at least 18 years old.

Parker added that if Soldiers are unable to make it home, Rocky's Zone will make sure Soldiers can get home safely by arranging for a cab to transport them if necessary.

The club also has food and refreshments available for purchase, as well as video games and many other types of games to play, free of charge.

Marne Soldiers, Family Members participate in Aerobic-thon

Spc. Michael Adams

3rd ID Public Affairs

The U.S. Army has always taken the opportunity to make sure that Soldiers and their Family Members are physically fit. On Jan. 22, Newman Fitness Center helped to make sure that people in the Fort Stewart community knew there was a fun way to keep in shape, by holding the 2011 Aerobic-thon and Health Fair.

The aerobic-thon was a four-hour aerobic event, which featured many different kinds of aerobics, including belly dancing, zumba, kick-boxing, even hula hoops. The health fair was a chance for participants to get health screenings as well as a chance to see different ways to maintain a healthy lifestyle.

Devin Bradley, a sports specialist for fitness with the Newman Fitness Center, was one of the organizers of the events.

She hoped that all of the fitness events and nutrition information at the event would lead to healthier lifestyles and combat a growing problem among the American population.

"We have the highest rate here in America of obesity," she said. "It's a growing problem, not just amongst the adults but amongst the kids. It's an area that we need to really focus on."

Bradley added that she hopes the classes and vendors at the event will serve as a stepping stone for people to lead a healthy and productive life.

For Nathaniel Robinson, a master fitness personal trainer/supervisor with the Newman Fitness Center, fitness is a way of life.

He was one of the instructors who led the approximately 130 participants in the event.

"I taught for the military 21 years," he said. "I taught it in college and high school. Fitness is a life source. If you're not fit, you don't feel good about yourself. If you make it a part of your lifestyle, you're going to be healthy, you may live to be 120 years old."

For Robinson, this event serves as more than just an opportunity to get in shape.

"It gets the Family Members involved, it gets the Soldiers involved," Robinson added. "It gives a chance for us to meet people and communicate with people. And it's good for the community."

One of the attendees, Jamisa Gibson, a Family Member, enjoyed the class a lot. "It's fabulous," she said. "I'm having an excellent time because there's such a variety of fitness training that you're not getting bored and you have the option to do some really different things."

She added others should come and take the opportunity to participate in the class.

"I highly recommend it," she said. "You can start on whatever level you're on and be able to benefit from whatever they're offering in the class. [People should] come out and try it."

TIME OUT! My super dilemma

Commentary by
Jennifer Hartwig
Hunter Army Airfield Public Affairs

We are in the midst of "Super Week" and I'm in the midst of a super predicament – I can't cheer for either team in the Super Bowl.

This has never happened to me before – I've always been able to choose one team over the other. In the past, either my team was playing, or I could cheer for a team because there was something innately likeable about one of the teams playing, such as was the case with last year's Saints, or I could cheer against one of the teams because there was something innately unlikeable about them. And having a team to cheer for – or against – is what makes the Super Bowl so entertaining. But this year, the Steelers and Packers have made my decision an impossible one.

My husband is a Minnesota Vikings fan, and therefore, his enemy is the Green Bay Packers. Consequently, if I want to stay married, I absolutely cannot cheer for Green Bay under any circumstance whatsoever.

In any other game my choice would be easy – cheer for whoever the Packers are playing against. But how can I cheer for the Steelers, a team of such unlikeable guys?

First and foremost in the unlikeable category – for me – is Ben Roethlisberger, who, for those of you living under a rock, was accused of sexual assault this past offseason. He wasn't charged in this particular instance, but the league felt there was enough evidence to prove he had at the very least violated the NFL's personal conduct policy. Big Ben, is at the worst, a sexual predator, and at the very least an idiot.

Strike number two against Pittsburgh in the unlikeable category is James Harrison, the guy who threatened to retire earlier this season when the league decided to start penalizing and fining players for flagrant hits, specifically to the head. What Harrison implied with that reaction was "I like to play dirty." Hitting players in the head is cheap, dirty and can lead to nasty injuries. But Harrison chooses – openly – to play this way.

Finally, there is their supposed "nice guy" Hines Ward, who in 2009 was voted by his fellow NFL players as the dirtiest player in the game. Not meanest, not toughest – dirtiest. That means cheap shots, poking eyes in a pile, etc. In 2008, he broke the jaw of Bengals rookie linebacker Keith Rivers with a "surprise" downfield block, which ended Rivers' season. After that hit, another player said about Ward, "That's what he's known for. He's a blind-side guy." Not such a nice guy after all.

Not to mention that the Steelers have won two championships in the past five years, and I really don't want them to win again – especially again with this loathsome team.

So I look at my options – send my marriage to counseling or cheer for a team of, in my opinion, vile men.

I'm in such internal turmoil over this game that I've seriously contemplated not watching at all. But how can I be the only person I know who doesn't watch the game?

So what can I do? I have to become resigned to the fact that one of the teams I can't like is going to win, and I will be emphatically unable to bask in the glory of the championship. In the end, all I can do is celebrate that one of these teams will lose, which I realize makes me a bitter person.

The only way this game could be worse was if the Jets were playing – then my home would be an athletic war zone.
